

Jordyn Anderson

Claire developed her own studying strategy similar to the one she used to use in high school. However it is extremely time consuming and because of that she does not have time to study effectively for all of her classes.

Claire also feels that it is important to spend time with her friends and family outside of school. Since she spends the vast majority of her time at school or at work she likes to decompress by spending time with her friends and relaxing. This makes it even more difficult for her to manage her time.

Claire's grades are beginning to show that her studying method is ineffective. She is very concerned because she wants to perform well in school, however she lacks guidance as to how to increase her overall performance through use of time management.

Claire downloads an application that her friends recommended to her. This app tells her how she should manage her time in order to optimize her time usage. The app creates and recommends a schedule for her and she begins to follow the schedule.

She quickly adapts to the new strategy that the application has created for her. She is now able to study, maintain her work schedule, and her social life. She is now also able to study for all of her classes effectively. She feels far more confident in her ability to perform well in school.

She now performs far better on all of her school work and is confident that she will continue to perform well in all of those assignments that are to come.